Introduction

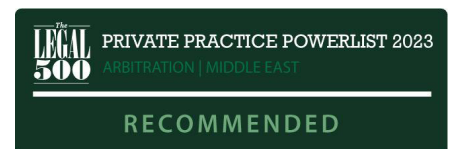

Airport operators and owners are facing an unprecedented business environment due to the disruption caused by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Our team works with international, regional and private airports to help them address current issues and strategically grow their businesses in the long term. We strive to build strong relationships and become a trusted advisor to airports around the world, enabling us to deliver prompt, strategic, and cost effective solutions.

Staffing and employment issues, together with current vastly reduced passenger numbers, can be of real concern to airports. We work closely with airport operators and their suppliers to help them address a broad range of employment law and HR issues via a dedicated HR professionals team, from the inevitable restructurings and redundancies to the reward and retention of key staff, as well as all aspects of UK immigration and pensions law.

Commercial relationships with airlines and service providers can be complex and subject to frequent renegotiation or disputes. We advise our airport clients throughout the negotiations and have significant experience working on contracts concerning aircraft landing, freight and other charges related to the use of airport infrastructure.

Where airports have an opportunity to grow and develop, we work with them to help expand and modernise the services they offer. We work closely with them to advise on both the procurement and tendering process for services, as well as the drafting of all relevant contracts. We also assist with any contractual disputes that may arise.

They're head and shoulders
